Vosch Grapple Saw supplied and fitted to our Takeuchi 2150 excavator

Giving you a massive safety gain....

The VOSCH 1900 series grapple saw was supplied and fitted to our Takeuchi 2150 excavator by Richard Court Forestry Engineering Ltd as the UK dealer, along with additional uprated hydraulics required to operate the grapple saw and bulletproof windscreen to protect the operator.

This makes light work of taking down trees with trunks to approx. 25" diameter, saving manpower and giving more safety to the operators.

Some of its uses and benefits:

1. Where it is unsafe to fell from the ground by chainsaw. Any ash showing signs of ash dieback should not be climbed, limiting the options in restricted positions. They are not called widow-makers for nothing, so be careful.
2. Taking down trees or branches overhanging streams and/or adjacent to the road, as you can grab them from the inside/field side without the danger of working roadside;
3. No operators standing at the base of the trees and well out of any danger zones;
4. Quicker and fewer people needed so returning an increased output;
5. Increased safety all round so all to gain and nothing to lose.
